

A man casts his vote in 2017 at Holy Cross Catholic Church in Tucker, Ga. (CNS/Chris Aluka Berry, Reuters)

by NCR Staff

View Author Profile

Join the Conversation

Send your thoughts to Letters to the Editor. Learn more

November 1, 2018

Share on BlueskyShare on FacebookShare on TwitterEmail to a friendPrint
Soundcloud

In recent weeks, NCR reporters have been traveling across the country to understand Catholic voters and what will influence their vote.

On the show today:

- Michael Sean Winters, who analyzes religion and politics for NCR.
- Heidi Schlumpf, NCR national correspondent based in Chicago.
- Brian Roewe, NCR staff writer.
- Maria Benevento, NCR Bertelsen intern.

Background reading:

- In a recent Distinctly Catholic column, Michael Sean Winters examines a new report that points to the majority of Americans who resent the dominance of the extremes in U.S. public discussion. Part two of his midterms series looks at a current polling and some of the institutionalized hurdles to change. His third column on the midterm elections underlines the mood: "In the midterms this year, however, issues don't matter. The president is running on fear. "
- Swing voters in Ohio — many of them Catholic — will likely determine the winner of a dead-heat midterm congressional race that observers see as a possible predictor of the 2020 presidential election, reports Heidi Schlumpf.
- Maria Benevento reports from El Paso: In response to low voter turnout, local Catholic leaders and advocates are working to promote voting, which some characterize as both an exercise of the moral duty to promote justice and a way to ensure that the concerns of all — including those who are most vulnerable and marginalized — are included in political decision-making. Latinos, who make up the majority of Catholics under 18 and are likely the future majority of the church, might be the answer sought by those concerned with representing the totality of Catholic teaching in politics.
- Watch this space: On Monday, we'll publish and link here to Brian Roewe's piece on midterm concerns in Iowa that show a rural-urban split.

How do I listen?

We can let you know when new podcast episodes are published. Sign up for emails here.

From your iPhone or iPad: Open the preloaded app called "Podcasts." It has a purple icon. If you're reading this from your phone, tap this link, which will take you straight there. (You can also use the magnifying glass icon to search; type "NCR in Conversation.") Once you're on the series page, you can tap on an episode title to play it. Tap on the "subscribe" button to have new episodes sent to your phone. If you prefer another podcast player, you can find "NCR in Conversation" there. (Here's the RSS feed.)

From your Android phone or tablet: You can listen and subscribe using the preloaded Google Play app. If you're reading this from your phone, tap this link to play the latest episode and learn more about the app.

From your desktop or laptop: You can also simply press the play button above to listen on this page. Make sure to keep this window open on your browser, or the audio will stop. You can always find the latest episode of NCR in Conversation at NCRonline.org/podcast.

Advertisement