Opinion

by Mick Forgey

View Author Profile

Join the Conversation

Send your thoughts to Letters to the Editor. Learn more

March 18, 2019

Share on BlueskyShare on FacebookShare on TwitterEmail to a friendPrint

Our team of copy editors reads and posts most of what you see on the websites for National Catholic Reporter and Global Sisters Report (the NCR project focusing on women religious). The Copy Desk Daily highlights recommended news and opinion articles that have crossed our desks on their way to you.

Pundits and others who speak publicly about their faith are taking a break from Twitter, and rethinking their social media presence. Pundits repent of Twitter sins, apply faith to social media

"This place is my home, and the sisters provide our needs, like food and shelter," says Akpa, a 20-year-old who grew up living at the Daughters of Divine Love's Charity Home in Amorji Nike. In Nigeria, Daughters of Divine Love give hope to abandoned children

"This pope has made dialogue a leitmotif of his papacy," Michael Sean Winters writes, "so it should not surprise anyone that he is also committed to dialogue in regards to both healing the divisions within the Chinese church and proclaiming the Gospel in that country." Will the Vatican's accord with China reweave the unity of the church?

Today's Daily Lenten Reflection examines Isaiah 55's text, "a powerful and compelling instrument for telling connection between the deep summons of God and the patient work of social divestment and restoration." Come to the water

ICYMI: St. Joseph Sr. Christine Schenk offered this conclusion in her most recent column: "Women do not have to wait to be ordained as deacons or priests to begin exercising our authority in the church." Pretty good. Women's authority can help heal our church's broken governance

Advertisement

Want to keep updated with the latest news from the National Catholic Reporter? Sign up here for news updates by email — including one that will send you Copy Desk Daily every Monday through Friday.